

COLLEGE SURVIVAL GUIDE

Midwest Edition

Featuring Advice from Current College Students and Moms of College Students Who Have Been There, Done That

For more tips, to share your own ideas or to build your own guide, visit Facebook and search for “College Survival Guide 2009.”

Clothing and Accessories Popular in the Midwest:

Pea Coat

Ear Muffs

PJs

Freshman Orientation

Heading off to college for the first time can mean lots of changes. You will be away from your parents and probably live in a 12'x19' room with another person you've just met. You will also have to fend (and care) for yourself. With thousands of freshmen heading off to college this year, The Clorox Company developed this College Survival Guide with the help of moms and college students from across the country to help ease the transition and start the year off right.

Inspired by a college student who sent a survival guide to her friends back home in California after her freshman year on the East Coast, this Guide will help freshmen and their parents get ready no matter where they are headed.

Every school is different. If you have your own tips, advice and “must haves” from where you go, share them by visiting Facebook and searching for “College Survival Guide 2009.” You can also build your own guide using a template on the site.

Advice from Those Who Know Best

There are lots of things you need for college, but some things you won't hear about from your parents. Like any new location, the Midwest has a style all its own. While your school administration may have already sent you a list of things to think about, they probably didn't have your dorm room or wardrobe in mind.

If you're heading to school in the Midwest, especially if you're not from the area, you may be surprised to find that blacks and greys aren't just for New Yorkers, and having clothes you can layer is just as much of a “must have” as textbooks and shower shoes. Here are some popular items you're likely to see a lot of, and things to expect if you're heading to the Midwest from students who are already there.

Clothing and Accessories Popular in the Midwest continued:

Moccasins

Wool Socks

Warm Vest

Blacks & Greys

Baggy Jeans

The Boring Stuff Mom Has to Say

The advice for helping you stay healthy, safe and successful when you go off to college is really the same things you've been hearing all your life, but a mom wouldn't be a mom if she didn't tell you anyway. Here are some tips from our panel of moms (just in case you haven't already heard them):

- Safety First – Your mom may sound like a broken record when she says these things, but they really are important...Don't walk home at night by yourself. If you have to walk home at night, most colleges offer free escort services from security. Find out about this service! If you have to pull an all-nighter, do it in your room, library or another safe and high-traffic area. If you're going for a run, find a running buddy, and don't run on trails or secluded areas after dark.
- Common Sense – Sick? Stay at home and rest! This is easier said than done, but try not to go out and spread your germs to others. No one wants them. Plus, laying low for a few days will get you back on your feet much sooner than if you tried to "tough it out."
- The School Part of Going to "School" – Although there's a ton of other things going on, you really are there for school, which means classes, research projects and exams. Set "study hours" for yourself to make sure you get to your work, start projects well in advance, form a study group and speak with your professors if you're having trouble.
- Don't be Stupid – Enough said. Just remember to consider the consequences of everything you do (and don't do) during your four years with everything from studying to partying.
- Get Sleep (just not in class) – Although it may be hard with everything going on, don't let yourself get run down. Sleep is a must, so avoid all-nighters if you can. It's an important way to stay healthy by helping boost your body's ability to fight the effects of colds and the flu, and will help you stay on top of your workload.
- Close Quarters – Having a roommate can be a great experience, but the simple fact that you two live, in some cases, literally on top of one another, can also bring some challenges. Avoid problems from the start by setting some simple ground rules. Consider the following: Do you want to share food? Do you plan on using the room for studying or socializing? How clean do you want to keep the room? Do you want advance notice before a guest comes over?
- Be Yourself and Have Fun – College can be full of new pressures; but it is also a great opportunity to explore new interests, meet new people and have fun. Stay open-minded when trying something new or meeting new people, but always remember to be yourself and have fun!

Dorm Room “Must Haves”:

Over-the-Door Hangers

Shower Caddy

Clorox Disinfecting Wipes

Bed Risers

Laundry Basket

Plastic Bins

Mini Fridge

Brita Water Filter

During your four years in the Midwest, expect to...

- Crave a Dairy Queen Blizzard about once a week
- Ask people to repeat themselves by saying “Say what?”
- Turn into a HUGE basketball fan, even if it’s not for your own school
- Wear PJ pants to class at least a few times (okay, maybe more than just a few)
- Start calling a bag a “sack,” ordering a Coke by asking for “pop” and saying “sweet” instead of “cool”
- See guys exercising in T-shirts with arm-hole cutouts down to the waist (or maybe even pulling out the scissors yourself)
- Develop a love of healthy and organic food
- Become a seasoned pro at Corn Hole (and even the winner of a few tournaments)

You’re Not in Kansas Anymore: Dorm Room “Must Haves”

While you’ll be gaining some really great experiences when you go off to school, you’ll also be giving up some of the comforts of home. While there, your dorm room will become your own personal kitchen, closet, office, entertainment center, dining room and bedroom...all rolled into one. Here are a few “must have” items and tips for your room from those who’ve lived to tell the tale.

5-Minute Dorm Room Clean-Up

Great not only for the morning after a late-night get together, but also for when your crush from calc decides to drop by for an impromptu study session.

- Scrounge up all the trash you can find – Throw it away outside of your room (not just into your closet) and don’t forget to recycle any plastic, glass or aluminum!
- Brooms aren’t just for mom – Pull out the broom and get rid of the crumbs! Sweeping out the dirt and crumbs from your late-night takeout is a quick way to make a huge difference.
- Wipe it down – Give surfaces – from your desktop to your bedside table to your keyboard – a quick clean-up with disinfecting wipes. When your desk serves as a storage space, make-up counter, kitchen and dining room table all at once, it always needs attention.
- Respect your bed – Don’t have time to make the bed? Pull up your comforter! Rooms always look cleaner (and bigger!) when the bed is made and the furniture is in its place.
- Top it off with a spritz of air freshener – Just not too much! There’s only so much fragrance a small space can handle.

Dorm Room “Must Haves”
continued:

Fan

Fun
Decorations

Bed
Sheets
(twin extralong)

Cork Board or
White Board

Pennants or Posters for Walls

Seasonal Flu & H1N1 101

Arguably worse than finals week, the flu can really put a damper on your time in college. Many freshmen (and their moms) may think that they've outgrown the need for a flu shot, but this year flu jitters are higher than ever. Think about it – you are now living in close quarters with a lot of new people. When a neighbor sneezes, it's likely you will not only hear it, you may even catch it. But don't panic. There are steps you can take to help protect yourself.

- Get vaccinated – In February 2008, The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) expanded the flu vaccination recommendations to include all children from six months through 18 years old – the age of many college freshmen. Most student health centers give vaccinations. It only takes a minute and you'll be glad you did it.
- Wash Your Hands – Wash your hands with warm water and soap for at least 20 seconds to kill germs. At college, people are everywhere, so wash your hands often to keep from spreading germs. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers also work. Carry a bottle in your bag for times when you're not near a sink. You don't even want to know how many germs are on the elevator buttons in your building!
- Cover Your Cough – If you have to cough or sneeze do it into your elbow, not your hand. Your neighbors and roommate will thank you!
- Think iDisinfect – All items that you share with your friends – like computer keyboards, cell phones or video games – should be disinfected regularly, as directed. While you wipe down these personal electronics, consider other frequently touched, hard non-porous surfaces like doorknobs, light switches and the mini fridge handle. Disinfecting wipes are a good option when used as directed to disinfect.

College Survival Guide Midwest “Must Haves” At-a-Glance

Dorm Room “Must Haves”

Bed Risers

Fan

Bed Sheets
(twin extra long)

Clorox Disinfecting Wipes

Over-the-Door Hangers

Shower Caddy

Mini Fridge

Pennants or Posters for Walls

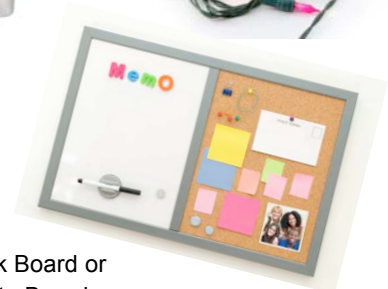

Laundry Basket

Brita Water Filter

Cork Board or White Board

Popular Clothing & Accessories

Pea Coat

Moccasins

Baggy Jeans

Ear Muffs

Warm Vest

PJs

Blacks & Greys

Wool Socks

Plastic Bins

Fun Decorations

